Prof. E. M. Wing, of Cornell University, was elected acting professor of electrical and mechanical engineering at Gettysburg College by the board of trustees at their regular meeting this morning.

Prof. Wing is a New Englander and a Quaker. He is a graduate of Haverford College where he received his bachelor's degree and afterward he pursued a four year's post graduate course in Cornell where he was an instructor during his attendance and for several years since.

Prof. A. R. Wentz was promoted to a full professorship. Clyde B. Stover was advanced from instructor in chemistry to assistant professor. J. Allen Dickson, Fred W. Troxell and Franklin W. Moser were advanced from assistants to instructors.

Spurgeon M. Keeny, a graduate in this year's class, was appointed instructor in English in Prep; and J. R. Nicholas, of the Seminary, was made student Y. M. C. A. secretary for the coming year.

Dr. T. C. Billheimer was re-elected a member of the executive committee of the board, and John F. Dapp was re-elected the Board's representative on the athletic council.

Rev. Dr. F. H. Knubel '93, of New York City, and Dr. P. D. Hoover '95, of Waynesboro, were elected members of the Board.

Resolutions were adopted on the death of Dr. H. W. McKnight and on the death of Dr. J. J. Young. Resolutions of congratulation were adopted in honor of Hon. George Ryneal Jr., of Martinsburg, West Virginia, who has been a member since 1873.

The treasurer's report for the past year was favorable.

A committee of three was appointed to confer with a committee of three from the alumni and President Granville concerning the completion of the new Pennsylvania College Book, a report to be made at the meeting of the Board in the winter.

The committee on the erection of dormitory fraternity houses reported adversely to the erection of houses for rooming purposes but left open the question of allowing the students to board in their lodges.

The committee on change of charter reported and the report was re-committed to the committee for further consideration, the sentiment of the board, on vote, showing that as a board, they favored a definite tenure of office for board members as against life tenure.

A request of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity for ground on which to erect a new house in "Fraternity Row", northwest of the main campus, was referred to the executive committee. It is the intention of the fraternity to retain their present lodge in addition to the new building.

Monday evening the college musical clubs drew a very good house for their annual concert. Several solos by Elmer Smith, of Biglerville, a member of the class of 1908, were the feature of the program.

After the concert the Sigma Chi entertained at a dance in their lodge and the Theta Phi fraternity in Glatfelter Hall. Several other fraternities held their banquets during the evening.

The Junior oratorical contest for the Reddig prize of $25 was held in Brua Chapel this morning. There were five contestants and the prize was awarded to Hubert Luther McSherry, of North Washington, with honorable mention of James Milton Lotz, of Altoona. The judges were Rev. J. B. Baker, Gettysburg; Rev. J. J. Hill, Littlestown; and Prof. H. Milton Roth, Gettysburg.

At eleven o'clock the Senior class day exercises took place on the College Campus, the hour being moved forward from the afternoon on account of other events scheduled for that part of the day. The exercises were largely attended and marked by the usual numbers.

MOUNTAIN ROBBERIES

Western Maryland Stations are Entered. Some Freight is Stolen.

Thieves have paid several visits recently to the Western Maryland Railway passenger and freight stations at Pen Mar. On one visit they carried off from the freight station some cigarettes, tobacco and confectionary consigned to Jason Crout, proprietor of the Pen Mar hotel. The value of the goods taken was $18.

The same night they effected an entrance to the passenger station but it is not believed they secured anything there. Nothing is missing.

The storage warehouse of J. E. Purdy, at the trolley terminal, was entered by robbers who made the oddest kind of a haul. They carried away a bucket half-full of paint that had been mixed by Mr. Purdy for use on his property there. A short time before, they stole a ham from the storage warehouse, which is immediately in the rear of Mr. Purdy's store.

EXPECT REPAIRS TO OXFORD ROAD

State Highway Department Acquainted with its Bad Condition will now Have Funds with which to Put it in Repair.

With the availability of more than a million dollars for work on the highways of the State now determined, it is expected that early relief will be given to the serious condition of the road between Gettysburg and New Oxford.

Several weeks ago an official of the State Highway Department visited Gettysburg and was approached by a number of citizens who urged most earnestly that some steps be taken to place in repair the stretch of bad road between the two sections of macadam, the one starting from Gettysburg and the other from New Oxford. The citizens making the request were told that the bad condition of the road was well understood but that there was no money on hand with which to go ahead.

The expenditure of about $100 on the road was, however, mentioned but the place is bad as ever. It will require no small sum to place the road in even a reasonably passable condition for it has been worn into deep ruts, and labor lasting many days will be necessary to make the highway safe. Many automobiles have been damaged at the place and many more have been stalled there, nearly farmers reaping a substantial harvest during the months of the early spring pulling out the stranded cars.

With the fact in consideration that this road is on the main highway from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia, that it is a portion of the great Lincoln Highway, and that it is likewise part of the through route from New York to San Francisco, it would seem that a substantial sum should be spent immediately for its repair.

The more than a million dollar fund which now becomes available is received from the issuance of automobile licenses. An opinion handed down in Dauphin County Court, on Monday, directs that the Auditor General and State Treasurer honor the requisition of the State Highway Commission against the accumulated automobile income. The constitutionality of the act providing for this had been attacked.

On the question which is the key to the whole situation—whether the tenth section of the motor vehicle license act appropriating the revenue from that source to the Highway Department conflicts with the specific appropriation act of 1909, which forbids payment of any State money not specifically appropriated—the Court holds that there is no doubt that the money was paid in, that the intent of the Legislature in making the appropriation after the questions raised in 1912 was plain and that the act of 1913 governs the earlier statute.

When the decision became known there was a general expression of gratification at the Capitol because the department has been forced to mark time and allow complaints about roads to accumulate while hundreds of thousands of dollars paid by automobile owners under the belief that it was to be used for roads remained idle in that treasury.

Governor John K. Tener said he was glad to learn of the decision and Commissioner Bigelow said the roads of the State would now receive the attention which they should have had long ago and that it should enable the department to proceed at once with repairs.

MAY HAVE PARADE

May Have Fourth of July Celebration in Gettysburg This Year.

A joint committee of the several patriotic orders of the town met Monday night to consider the advisability of holding a celebration in Gettysburg on July Fourth. The plan as now proposed provides for a parade in the evening and some exercises in the Square. It was decided to invite other organizations of the same orders in the county to participate.

LIFTS BLOCKADE AT TAMPICO

Huerta Orders Gunboats Back to Puerto Mexico.

THE CRISIS IS AVERTED

Dictator Suspends Blockade Order and Demands United States Views on Arms Going to Rebels.

Washington, June 9. — Provisional President Huerta has decided, after all, not to blockade Tampico and force the hand of the United States, with the possibility of disrupting the mediation proceedings at Niagara Falls.

Senor Riano, the Spanish ambassador, notified Secretary of State Bryan officially to that effect.

Thus the latest crisis in the Mexican situation, fraught with possibilities of renewed hostilities between the Huerta government and the United States, has passed over, at least for the present.

With the suspension of the blockade of Tampico, Huerta, it is learned, suggested to the mediators the necessity of steps on their part to prevent the landing of the Antilla's cargo. The conference, it is expected, will take the subject under consideration and recommendations for action by the United States to divert the Antilla from Tampico or at least to prevent the unloading of the contraband portion of her cargo at the Constitutionalist port are possible.

It was to have the Antilla that Huerta had ordered his gunboats, the Zaragoza and Bravo, from Puerto Mexico to Tampico to institute a blockade.

The Zaragoza and the Bravo arrived off the mouth of the Panuco river at Tampico on Monday, according to a dispatch received at the navy department from Admiral Badger. The United States cruisers Tacoma and Sacramento accompanied them to their anchorage. Admiral Badger did not say whether their commanders knew of the suspension of the blockade.

According to Ambassador Riano's information, orders had been issued by Huerta for the gunboats to return to Puerto Mexico.

There were broad intimations that the influence which had caused Huerta to rescind his order had gone to Mexico City from Niagara Falls, where, it was said, the mediators and the Mexican delegates had been urging him in the strongest possible terms to let the mediation proceed.

Meantime mediation took a forward spurt and the American delegates presented a peace plan to the mediators at Niagara Falls that included the views of President Wilson on all the points involved. It was intimated that this plan had received the sanction of the Constitutionalist agents in Washington.

HUERTA DEMANDS U. S. VIEWS

Suspends Blockade Order Pending Reply to Questions.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 9. — It was learned here that the complication over the Antilla carrying war supplies to the rebels at Tampico was called to the attention of the American state department by the Huerta government through a note addressed by the mediators to Secretary Bryan.

In this note there was conveyed an inquiry from the Mexican government about as follows:

"Did the United States government construe the armistice between the United States and Mexico to obligate it to prevent arms entering into the port of Tampico, which the Huerta government had declared closed, and if the United States did not so interpret the armistice, would it consider it a breach of armistice if gunboats of Mexico sought to prevent the landing of arms from the steamer Antilla, for use of the Constitutionalist?"

The order by General Huerta rescinding the blockade decree is said to be merely a suspension pending an answer from the American government to the Mexican inquiry. It is not known whether any answer had been given by the Wilson administration, but it is believed that such reply as was contemplated would be made through the Spanish ambassador direct to General Huerta and also to the mediators at Niagara Falls.

Justice Lamar spoke hopefully of the general situation. No word has been received from Carranza, according to Justice Lamar, though the reply to the last communication is being anxiously awaited.

Carranza Sets Up Capital. Saltillo, Mex., June 9. — General Venustiano Carranza, "first chief" of the Constitutionalist, set up his government in Saltillo, his home city, which he left on the day that President Madero was killed, more than a year ago.

General Carranza received an enthusiastic greeting from his old friends and neighbors. With the establishment of the Constitutionalist government a new stage in the revolutionary situation has been reached. Carranza has notified the mediators at Niagara Falls that he will answer their latest communication from Saltillo. It is possible the transmission of this reply will be delayed until after Carranza has selected all the members of his cabinet and conferred with them.

GRAPE Vine Sunday School will hold a festival on Saturday, the 13th.

BUMPER WHEAT CROP SHOWN BY REPORT

900,000,000 Bushels is Government Report.

Washington, June 9.—The high cost of living was given another knockout punch by a government report promising a record combined wheat yield of 900,000,000 bushels.

In addition to the estimated yield of 638,000,000 bushels for winter wheat, the report shows a condition of 95.5 per cent for spring wheat on an acreage of 17,990,000 acres.

This is a particularly good start for the spring crop.

The estimated output is 262,000,000 bushels, making the total predicted crop of 900,000,000 bushels.

James A. Patten more than a month ago was the first to come out with such a prediction. He said he wouldn't be surprised if the yield reached 1,000,000,000 bushels.

The deterioration of about 3 per cent in winter wheat since last month is not especially bearish, as harvest time is so near.

The indicated yield of spring wheat per acre is 14.6 bushels and of winter wheat 16.9 bushels.

346 Men Killed in Coal Mines in April

Washington, June 9.—Men killed in and about coal mines in the United States in April numbered 346, as compared with 285 in April, 1913. This large increase was due to an explosion at Eccles, W. Va., which killed 180 men. For four months ending with April this year's total was 917 killed, compared with 918 killed in the same period last year.

T. R. AT MADRID FOR WEDDING

Police Guard Against Hostile Demonstration.

TRAVELS ON TRAIN WITH KING

Each Was Unaware of the Presence of the Other and There Was No Meeting.

Madrid, June 9.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt arrived at Madrid on his first visit to Spain, completing his journey to attend the wedding of his son, Kermit Roosevelt, and Miss Belle Wyatt Willard, daughter of the American ambassador to Spain.

There was a small crowd gathered at the station, including a number of police in plain clothes, who were distributed about the depot as a result of the publication of several newspaper articles antagonistic to Colonel Roosevelt.

The chief of police had feared the possibility of some evidence of an unfriendly feeling being displayed against the former American president, but none whatever was shown.

There was an affectionate greeting between Colonel Roosevelt, his son, Kermit and his daughter, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

Colonel Joseph Willard, the American ambassador, members of the embassy staff, and Senor Mendez, the Spanish under secretary of state, were also at the station to meet Colonel Roosevelt. He was driven to the American embassy.

King Alfonso traveled on the same train for some distance with Colonel Roosevelt, but as each was unaware of the presence of the other there was no meeting.

King Alfonso had been to Biarritz to see his physician, and it was merely a coincidence that his car was attached to the train in which Colonel Roosevelt was traveling.

When the king left the train the ex-president was an interested spectator, as his majesty passed through a guard of troops drawn up on the platform. His majesty boarded an automobile, which he himself drove.

BIG PLANT CLOSED

More Westinghouse Employees Join the Strikers.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 9.—Hemmed in on every side by pickets, the great plant of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company is closed tight.

Those of the working force who had not joined the Allegheny Congenial Industrial Union in its fight for changed working conditions did not report and only an occasional guard could be seen from the street.

Burgess A. H. Snyder issued a proclamation calling on the strikers and the companies affected by the strike to assist the borough authorities in protecting property should it become necessary.

Twenty-five railroad detectives cleared the bridge leading from the railroad to the electric company's office when a train arrived with $175,000 to be used in paying the strikers.

ARMY MAN KILLS MEXICAN

Lieutenant Goes to Rescue of Mexican Police in Vera Cruz.

Washington, June 9.—General Funston reported to the war department a street fight in Vera Cruz which ended in the fatal shooting of a drunken Mexican by Lieutenant S. H. Houston, of the Twenty-eighth Infantry.

Two Mexican policemen were stabbed, but not fatally wounded. The policemen were taking a prisoner to jail on a charge of drunkenness. They were attacked by the friends of the prisoner and were being worsted when Lieutenant Houston went to their rescue.

General Funston exonerated Lieutenant Houston, holding the shooting justifiable.

U. S. Keeps Minnesota Dry.

Washington, June 9.—The policy of the federal government in closing all saloons in the Indian lands ceded to the United States in 1855 and now constituting the greater part of the state of Minnesota, north of the forty-sixth parallel, was upheld by the supreme court as a valid exercise of the guardianship over the 7000 Indians still in that section. More than 282,000 white folk live in the ceded territory.

China in Partnership With John D. Pekin, June 9.—President Yuan Shi Kai has telegraphed instructions to the provincial authorities in Shen Si to give every assistance possible to the Standard Oil company's experts who are investigating the fields in the province. He ordered the officials to impress upon the people the fact that the government has entered into a partnership with the Standard Oil company.

The insurgents are stubborn in their refusal to accept the government of Prince William of Wied and demand a Moslem prince.

KILL HUSBAND, HIDES BODY, SURRENDERS

Woman Says She "Is Willing to Pay Penalty."

Charleston, W. Va., June 9.—"I have killed my husband and I am willing to pay the penalty," quietly remarked Mrs. Dollie McSurley, as she walked into the office of Sheriff Bonner Hill here.

Prosecuting Attorney Townsend was quickly summoned, and Mrs. McSurley made a detailed statement to him. She said her husband, Bert McSurley, had come to their home at Sarsbury, near Charleston, last Saturday afternoon after he had been drinking, that he mistreated one of their children and tried to kill her with a butcher knife. She seized a hatchet, hit him on the head with it and when he was down stabbed him with the knife.

She hid the body in the cellar, where she kept it until Monday. She then dragged it 200 feet to the tracks of the Kanawha & Michigan railroad, where it was struck by a train.

WAYS OF MAKING SHIPWRECK SAFER

Life Saving Suit That Keeps One Warm In Water.

SUGGESTED BY LEWIS NIXON

Says Such a Device Would Have Prevented Great Loss of Life In Empress of Ireland Horror—Sound Wave Expert Advocates Submarine Bell as Best Warning of Impending Danger.

Lewis Nixon, the ship builder, believes that hundreds of lives might be spared in sea disasters with an efficient life saving suit that would keep persons warm when in the water. He says that it is perfectly possible to have a life saving suit that would be comfortable for many hours in the coldest water.

"With every loss of a vessel we look for lessons, find them each time and then ignore them," says Mr. Nixon in the New York Herald. "It's true we do not build vessels to collide with one another, yet we have had many collisions of late. We build to avoid fire, yet fire still stands out, to my mind, as the great peril at sea."

"But let us read our lesson from recent wrecks. In all many have been lost who might have been saved with an efficient life saving suit."

"It is not only necessary to have the man in the water kept afloat until relief comes. We all know of the grow-some sight of numerous corpses floating on the ocean, dead from exposure, after the loss of the Titanic. It is perfectly possible to don a life saving suit that one can be comfortable in for many hours in an icy sea."

"It may be said that such a device is too bulky to be carried and that it will not often be used. Yet if such devices had been available the greater part of the passengers of the Titanic and the Empress of Ireland would now be alive."

Chutes Down Ship's Sides.

"Since, under certain conditions, which have been of frequent occurrence of late, safety lies in getting afloat, there should be regular chutes down which one could slide and be delivered clear of the vessel. When one thinks of jumping from the deck of a vessel as high as a house the terror of contemplation results in demoralization just at a moment when the keenest wit is needed. Of course this does not argue that we must not have the best boat and boat-lowering equipment possible."

"The safe transfer of all passengers into the lifeboats is, of course, the most desirable outcome, but, as we see, this is not always possible."

"A side winding blow delivered by such a vessel as the Storstad would sink almost any vessel, though I am inclined to think that the heavy scuttlings of large vessels like the Lusitania, the Imperator or the Vaterland would break off the stem of a vessel so much smaller and so localize the damage. Our aim must be, of course, to keep them apart."

"I have expected before this to see some direction indicator, to the need of which I called attention when the Titanic sank. Such indicator worked by wireless to point toward the approaching or signaling vessel being moved by wireless rays originating on the other vessel, each to have such an indicator worked by rays from the other at a distance up to, say, five miles."

"There should be on all passenger vessels storage batteries that would light up enough lights in passageways and about the decks to enable passengers to move freely and special colored lights, well understood, to show the means of reaching the upper deck."

Expert Urges Submarine Bell.

That marine tragedies like the sinking of the Empress of Ireland are needless, even inexorable, is the contention of J. B. Millitt, with whom a New York Times correspondent discussed the subject at Cambridge, Mass. Sound waves, Mr. Millitt says, are absolutely true in water, whereas in air they vary in accuracy of direction; hence submarine bell warnings of danger are superior to all others in time of fog or darkness.

Mr. Millitt was one of the first to take up the study of sound in water and for seven years as an officer of the company which introduced the system now in general use all over the world was engaged in perfecting the apparatus, making it practicable and causing its adoption in marine circles.

"HUSBAND DID RIGHT IN SPANKING ME," SAYS WIFE.

"My husband spanked me, but I disobeyed him, and he did right to punish me," said Mrs. Louis Laparone, a twenty-year-old bride, in court at Jamaica, N. Y.

"So you think he had a right to punish you?" asked Judge Salmon.

"Yes, I do," the young woman replied. "I think every wife should obey her husband. I promised to do so when I married. I shall never disobey again."

By No Means.

No, Maude, dear, just because a girl calls a fellow a muf is no indication that she wants him to hold her hands.

WRITES THAT LIFE IN THE ARCTIC IS LOTS OF FUN.

Too Fine to Leave, Says Navy Ensign With Crocker Land Expedition.

"This is the life!"

Summed up in four words, this is the stamp of approval placed on life in the arctic regions by Fitzhugh Green, ensign, U. S. N., a member of the Crocker Land expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, in a letter to his father, who lives in Missouri.

Green's letter reads: "Our house is a howling success. It is electric lighted, and we have hot and cold water on tap. We eat two meals a day, at 9 a. m. and 4 p. m. We haven't seen the sun since October deiter was written on Jan. 11, but the horrors of the arctic night are all rot, simply because you are having such a cracking good time at other occupations that you have no time to think of home except now and then."

"I am having a lot of new clothes made for the spring trip. It will be a hard pull (dash to Crocker Land), but I don't think we will fail. The cold is different from the cold at home. It is not to be feared so much as other things. Wind at 40 degrees below zero—real wind that roars like an express train coming through a tunnel—doesn't pierce the skin clothes that we have, but it seems to get in under them in a fearful way that cannot be imagined. "We work in the mornings. I usually walk in the afternoon. After dinner we study, play chess or read. It is a happy life. I sleep in a snow igloo that has been built for me outside the house."

"I hope we can stay another year. I guess the Lord made me an Eskimo and then forgot and sent me to you instead of to Panik-pah or the like."

"The Eskimos are an ideal crowd. They are good natured, unselfish and everlastingly good fun."

"Don't expect me home until you see me. This place is too fine to leave."

POLO A GAME FOR THE RICH.

Last Year's Matches Cost More Than a Million—The Sport Described.

Only the wealthy can afford to play polo. Last summer it was estimated somewhere in the neighborhood of $1,350,000 was expended in staging the international matches, two games played on the polo field at Meadow Brook, N. Y. Employing long division to divide this sum by 180, it is seen that each minute of actual play cost $7,500. In 1911, when America successfully defended the polo challenge cup against an English four, winning the two games played, the competition cost not less than $600,000.

What the total cost of this month's games will be it is impossible to estimate with accuracy now.

Polo is played on a field 900 by 500 feet. At each end are two goal posts twenty-four feet apart, and along the sides are white boundary boards ten inches high. A goal is scored when a player knocks the ball between the goal posts of the opposing team. If he knocks it between his own goal posts the play counts a quarter of a goal against him.

Eight periods of seven and one-half minutes each are played. Three minutes are allowed between periods to permit for changing ponies and seven minutes between the fourth and fifth periods. Each team consists of four players.

Ponies cannot exceed 14.2 hands in height. The ball is three and one-eighth inches in diameter. The mallets used are fifty to fifty-six inches long.

HOW TO TIP IN AMERICA.

San Francisco Steamship Company Tells Australians the Scale.

A San Francisco steamship company gives Australians the following information concerning tips in America:

"In restaurants or hotel cafes keep to the 10 per cent rule. Bellboys should get 5, possibly 10, cents for a service. The maid at a hotel should receive a small gratuity—say about 50 cents a week."

"Barbers in fashionable hotels expect a ten cent tip, and hotel elevator boys should be tipped at the rate of 25 cents a week. Sleeping car porters should be paid about 25 cents a day, although if the traveler feels exceedingly prosperous this might be stretched to 50 cents."

KERMIT HAS REAL ROOSEVELT SPIRIT

Like Father Like Son Applies to Young Bridegroom.

HIS EVENTFUL 24 YEARS.

As Fond of Adventure as the Colonel, With Whom He Undauntedly Shared Perils of Africa and Brazil—Full of Energy Ever Since He Was the "Cut Up" of the White House.

When Kermit Roosevelt reached Madrid for his marriage to Miss Belle Wyatt Willard, daughter of the American ambassador to Spain, he was an altogether different looking young man from what he was at the time of his departure for the Brazilian wilderness. The hardships he had gone through with his father seemed to have added several years to his appearance.

Kermit Roosevelt's love of adventure rivals that of his distinguished father, the former president, and he came through the greatest adventure of his life, that in the Brazilian jungle, with flying colors. He did his share of the big game hunting and faced the perils and privations that were encountered by the party with a fortitude that won the admiration of his father.

Kermit Roosevelt is twenty-four years old and for a young man of that age has seen considerable of the world. He accompanied Colonel Roosevelt on his famous big game hunt in Africa, and it is said that he proved to be even a better marksman than his father.

As "Cut Up" and Philosopher.

When the colonel was president Kermit often got into the newspapers through boyish pranks or bits of juvenile philosophy he uttered. Since he reached early manhood he has spent most of his time traveling in the woods or on trips of exploration and sightseeing with his father.

He spent most of his boyhood in Washington while his father was a member of the civil service commission, assistant secretary of the navy, vice president and later in the White House as president. He went to public school and was considered one of the most vigorous boys who attended.

At Groton, where he was educated preparatory to college, there was another student who prided himself upon his English birth and parentage. As Fourth of July approached young Roosevelt asked the boy mischievously: "Are you English?"

The reply was emphatic. "Well," said the president's son, "aren't you glad we whipped you so you can have a holiday on the 4th of July?"

Kermit entered Harvard in 1908. In March of the following year he started with his father for a long hunting trip in Africa, primarily as the official photographer of the caravan, but he killed some big game during the weeks that he remained there and had two narrow escapes from death. In September, 1911, he returned to Harvard.

Although in looks Kermit probably resembles his mother more than his father, he is in speech and manner his father over again. He has the family habit of rapid, distinct enunciation. His gestures are jerky, decisive and muscular.

Who the Willards Are.

The young lady whose hand and heart the young explorer won is the elder of two daughters of Joseph Edward Willard, appointed ambassador to Spain by President Wilson July 11 last. She is of the blond type, rather small and with clear cut features. She was born in Richmond, Va., twenty-one years ago. Her mother was Miss Belle Layton Wyatt, a member of one of the oldest families in Baltimore.

Ambassador Willard is a lawyer by profession. He moved to Richmond more than twenty years ago and soon became active in Democratic politics.

Ambassador Willard was on the staff of General Fitzhugh Lee in Cuba in the war with Spain. He was in the house of representatives from 1894 to 1902 and lieutenant governor of Virginia from 1902 to 1906.

CUCUMBER NOVELTIES.

LUNCHEON MENU.
Macaroni and Cheese.
Cucumber Fritters.
Hot Rolls. Jam.
Cocoa.

MANY people are unaware that cucumbers may be served in a great variety of satisfactory ways other than in salads. They make nice entrees and are most useful viands with which to give relish to the summer luncheon.

A few desirable ways of cooking them are as follows:

Cooked In Stock.

Cucumber Patties.—Peel and cut a cucumber into slices about one and a half inches thick. Scoop out a little from the center of each, leaving the slices in the form of cups. Simmer till tender in a pint of white stock, with a teaspoonful each of sugar and vinegar. Fill cases with hot seasoned minced cucumbers. Serve with brown sauce made with the stock.

Cucumbers In Butter.—Take a cucumber, peel and cut into pieces two inches long. Take out the seeds and cook in boiling salted water. Drain; then put into a saucepan with a piece of butter and simmer for some minutes. Serve with chopped parsley. It may be prepared in the same way to serve with a white sauce instead of with parsley.

Drain Well Before Serving.

Cucumber Fritters.—Pare and grate some cucumbers and press out the juice. To one pint of the pulp add half a cupful of milk, one cupful of flour, three beaten eggs, one tablespoonful of melted butter, half a teaspoonful of salt and a quarter teaspoonful of white pepper. Beat well, drop from a spoon into smoking deep fat and fry until a golden brown. Drain thoroughly before serving.

A Novel Stew.

Stewed Cucumbers.—Take equal quantities of cucumbers and white onions, two ounces of butter, three tablespoonfuls of gravy, two tablespoonfuls of white wine, a small piece of mace, salt and paprika to taste, and a piece of butter rolled in flour. Slice the cucumbers and onions, removing the coarse seeds. Fry both vegetables lightly in two ounces of butter.

Drain from the butter and place in a stewpan with the gravy, wine and mace. Set over the fire and stew very gently for six or seven minutes; then stir in a piece of butter rolled in flour. Add the seasoning and shake over the fire until the sauce thickens. Serve hot.

Anna Thompson.

told Mrs. Huxley. In a memoir of Mrs. Huxley the London Times recalls that in the "Life of Huxley" it is told how, before their marriage, Huxley took his wife, who was very ill, to one of the most famous doctors of the day, as if merely a patient he was interested in. Then, as one member of the profession to another, he asked him privately his opinion of the case. "I give her six months to live," said Aesculapius. "Well, six months or not," replied Huxley, "she is going to be my wife." Huxley died in 1895 and his wife in 1914.

The Busy Man.

Peals of laughter came from the president's room as the secretary stepped out.

"Mr. Green is too busy to see you at present," said the secretary politely.

"I'm sorry," said the man who called on business. "Will you go back and tell Mr. Green that I've got two stories just as good as the one he's heard if he'll let me in to tell them?"—Detroit Free Press.

The British Museum.

In the early days of the British museum, a century or more ago, the place was open for only six hours daily on five days a week during the summer and four hours daily during the rest of the year. Nobody could remain in the building for more than two consecutive hours, and the number admissible at one time was strictly limited to fifteen. Each batch of visitors was shepherded by an attendant.

The story is a direct narrative of a fancied incompatibility between a self-made, iron-willed man and the humble, home-loving wife of his early struggles.

CHAPTER II.

As Slade turned from the frightened, insignificant figure of his fleeing wife, he saw a woman of perfect poise and queenly carriage, a woman a trifle haughty and insolent in her youth and beauty and assured command of all the intricacies of social grace and charm. Her wide, full eyes met his with an engaging, frank curiosity to see this new factor in the political world. Her gown was a triumph of soft, shimmering silk and alluring chiffon—a gown that emphasized the charm of her proud, statuesque figure. She was the sort of woman that makes a man glow with pride to present as his wife or daughter. She was all that Mary Slade was not.

Slade stood looking at her, fascinated, forgetting for the moment the man she was with, remembering nothing but the magnetic personality of the woman whose reputation for doing big things in a big way was already known to him—a woman whose eyes meeting his gave back flash for flash and understanding for understanding.

Almost mechanically Slade found himself acknowledging Senator Strickland's formal presentation of his daughter. Heatily he offered his hand, which the girl, perfectly at ease, grasped with a cordial, sympathetic pressure. Her eyes were looking critically into his, much as if she were trying to read him through and through and take his measure for future use.

Her eyes were full of acceptance of the situation, her thoughtful inquiry for Mr. Slade's health, prompted by well-bred sympathy rather than any curious interest, and the cultured modulation of her splendid voice, charmed him as no woman had ever done before.

There was nothing of the shy, retiring ingenué in Katherine Strickland's makeup. She was a woman of splendid physique and wonderful mental development. Her appeal to a man was that of a dominant intellect as much as of a lovely woman. She immediately impressed Slade as being keen-witted, strong-minded and clever. His admiration displayed itself in the shining eyes and his unusually affable, attentive manner.

Suddenly he found himself comparing his own little old-fashioned wife with this handsome, self-possessed woman before him. What a wife Katherine Strickland would be for the governor of a state! What a picture she would make presiding at the head of a millionaire's dinner tables! How wonderfully such a woman would adorn the richly furnished rooms of his newly built mansion! Instead of the work-worn fingers of his wife, continuously fumbling with darning threads, he saw, in a mental vision, this woman's lovely hands constantly engaged in unwinding the threads of problematic political tangles. Here was a woman who would be a man's wife and comrade—the very antithesis of the household drudge his own wife was content to be, with no interest outside of the four walls of her home and no desire for anything bigger in life than the daily routine of breakfast, dinner and supper, washing on Monday, ironing on Tuesday, and so on to the end of the week—week after week in the same deadly rut. Here was a woman who would "go along with a man"—possibly a step ahead, blazing the way for new and greater glories and recognizing no limit.

Slade brought his reflections to a sudden halt as he remembered the girl's father.

"Why, what has happened to you, senator? Your face looks different than it did this afternoon."

"Her fault," replied the senator, with a smile of repellant affection, indicating his daughter. "She made me cut my beard this way. It's French."

Katherine laughed a delightful, throaty little laugh.

"Nonsense, father," she protested. "Of course, I like the West, but I don't believe in being absolutely typical. I was horrified when I got back and found you so blatantly the typical, much-carbonated Westerner."

"Mr. Slade," resumed Strickland, "a few influential men from different parts of our state are having a meeting in town tomorrow, and I want you to meet them. I'm arranging a little impromptu dinner, and thought Katherine might be able to persuade Mrs. Slade and yourself to join us."

"Oh, father, tell the truth," Katherine interrupted. "These gentlemen want to meet you, Mr. Slade. I hear we're to expect great things of you. You see, I've been mixed up in politics all my life, and I do love to have a hand in them."

"She'd run for president if they'd let her," teased her father.

"Indeed I would," the girl admitted, bravely. "I've got politics in my blood, and home doesn't seem like home unless politics are being brewed in our dining-room. So you'll both come, won't you—you and Mrs. Slade."

Slade was stammering his acceptance when Strickland interrupted abruptly.

"How'd you like to be governor, Slade?"

Slade threw back his head with a laugh that was intended to denote complete unconcern.

"Oh—that talk! Did the evening papers put that into your head—or—and he paused significantly, "did you put it into the evening papers?"

Strickland's laugh was a practical admission.

"It would mean a hard fight, Slade. The water-front crowd's against you, and you can't get on without their influence."

"Not in this town, at least," amended Katherine.

"You've got to have Wesley Merritt, his paper, his highfalutin editorials and his speechmaking—and his wife," Strickland explained. "He and his crowd run the town."

"Oh, you mean my neighbors?" asked Slade. "They'll come around," he finished, meaningly.

"But, man alive! Only today Merritt's attack on you was scurrilous. I remonstrated with him myself. He's your out-and-out enemy. I've tried to get him—to come over and shake hands, but he swears he'll never cross your threshold."

"I guess they'll come when I want 'em to come," Slade interrupted, with an assurance his auditors could not understand. "In fact, I'm looking for 'em any minute now," and he consulted his watch.

"You're looking for them—here—to-night?" gasped Strickland, showing that he thought Slade was making a joke of the matter.

"Yes, tonight," replied the would-be governor, quietly, and turned to Katherine.

Strickland subsided, a question growing in his mind as to whether he had fully measured the man he expected to use for his own political and financial ends. There was in Slade's method of fighting a direct and open quality that would make him hard to handle in the crooked and indirect ways of political life.

"He wants to boost you," she added, suddenly.

"Letting out secrets," her father accused, playfully.

But Katherine was never more serious. "You're his dark horse," she persisted.

"You're a lucky man, senator," Slade broke in, as he watched Katherine admiringly. "You're a lucky man to have a charming young woman behind you in the race."

"That's all we women are for," answered Katherine, bitterly, "standing behind some man and watching him do things."

"Why, child alive, you do things yourself," the senator remonstrated. "She makes busts, Slade—heads. Done some big guns in Europe."

Katherine sighed and leaned back wearily in her chair. "Oh, in my feminine way, I model," she admitted. "But if there'd been one drop of Napoleon in father I shouldn't have had to fall back on modeling clay. I should have been molding," she hesitated, and then finished daintily, "opinions and people."

Fifteen minutes' sleep after the heaviest work and the main meal of the day will count more for efficiency than five times 15 minutes of sleep in the morning."

She Was All That Mary Slade Was Not.

Katherine Strickland's eyes narrowed as she met Slade's gaze. Her quick, calculating mind saw in this man the possibility of realizing her highest hopes and ambitions. With such a man a woman could scale any heights—reach any goal. He was hard—yes! But a man needs to be hard in these days and times if he is ever to accomplish anything. In her fertile brain smoldered ambitions as great as his ambitions that she now realized would never be attained unless she made some great, radical change in her life.

She had pushed her father as far as the man would—could go. She had outdistanced every girl in her circle. She had reached high, but she had triumphed. Now she was at the end of her tether. It was a matter of making some one huge stroke or sinking back into stupid obscurity, a situation all the more bitter because of her previous successes. The thought of settling down into the everyday life of the western city where she was born made her very soul quiver. Surely there was something more in life for her. Surely there were bigger goals to be gained. She had never realized how empty the old home life was until now, when she suddenly found herself a part of it again after the brilliant European season and the stimulating, exciting life in diplomatic circles at the capital. The thought of remaining in the West, a big frog in a little puddle, had grown positively hateful to her. Big or little herself, she wanted a big puddle. She was quite satisfied in her own mind that no puddle would be so big that she couldn't become a frog of considerable size in it.

Now, as her restless brain and soul clamored for higher goals and a wider field, the thought of Slade's millions, Slade's dominating, forceful personality, Slade's reputation for sweeping everything before him, Slade's probable governorship, flashed through her mind like a burning streak of electric fire. With him, with his weapons, what a career lay before a woman!

Just as suddenly she found herself wondering what sort of a woman had been a mate to this man for so many years. She was conscious of a poignant pang of envy—jealousy almost—against this woman who had the opportunity which was denied her.

"Well, what do you think of your own country, now you're back?" she heard Slade's voice saying. "Seem big to you?"

"Oh, I like Washington," she said, bringing herself back to the conversation with difficulty.

Her father, noticing her abstraction, remarked indulgently: "She likes Washington, Slade. She likes the East, but she doesn't tell it to everybody on account of father's votes. Now, Slade and I love our western city, eh, Slade?"

"Well, with some reluctance, it's a good starting point," Slade admitted.

"Ah!" Katherine exclaimed, now thoroughly herself again. "There's a man for you! He's not going to let a town stand in his way. Mr. Slade, this is father's Waterloo. He's been a great disappointment to me. That's the worst of parents. We children never know how they're going to turn out. If father had only listened to me it would have been Washington for him—Washington for me. But he wouldn't cross the Delaware. He wouldn't leave the West. If there'd only been a drop of Napoleon in father," she concluded with a sudden burst of vehemence.

"Napoleon!" repeated the senator. "Yes, Napoleon. He got what he wanted, and nothing ever stood in his path. I just love the way he rode over poor old Josephine's heart, don't you?"—and she turned to Slade.

"But he was right!" she continued, earnestly, as if she were making a plea for something that lay very close to her own heart. "Why should we let anyone hold us back? I wouldn't. But mother didn't want to leave the West, so father stuck to his town and his friends and his state. Now he stands in the background and boosts other men politically."

"He wants to boost you," she added, suddenly.

"Letting out secrets," her father accused, playfully.

But Katherine was never more serious. "You're his dark horse," she persisted.

DON'T KILL THEM WITH KINDNESS.

The little turk in the picture is like many other little poult, chicks and quacks that die every season—he is about to go up the spout because he is fed full to the neck.

These youngsters have such a winning way. Little turks especially set up a squeal like a lot of little pigs. They chase you around and put up such a good bluff that you believe they are starving to death, and you are so good hearted, and you do want them to grow, and brooder chicks, too, have no mother, and every time some person looks at them they think, "The poor motherless bairns!" And so they also must have some more feed, and that's just the way thousands of young stock are killed with kindness.

We ought to follow nature more in our raising of young stock. Mother

KILLED BY KINDNESS.

Turkey, Madam Hen, Mrs. Quack and Mother Goose live rather on the hobo style. They pick up a little here, a little there and no large quantity anywhere, and their rule is:

Feed little, but often.

We should study the digestive system of fowls, and we will find the water fowl's different from the hen's, the turkey's, duck's and chicken's digestive apparatus different in certain particulars and their capacity for digesting and assimilating feed not near so great as some persons imagine.

We should study the different breeds as to digestive capacity and their capability to be forced for fast growth, and we will find some get sour crop and go down with leg weakness on what others will thrive and set fat on.

We must remember these tiny balls of down that come from the shell are but tender babies—that have delicate organs that are not hard to break down and need little to sustain them.

Much young stock dies from overfeeding and much adult stock also.

Many hens do not wear out laying, but trying to digest an overplus of feed. They break down, get baggy, drop over dead from apoplexy, because of overfat.

They get sour crop, liver trouble; they don't lay nor pay because they are overfat.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

An American firm claims to have sold 40,000 incubators last year. Now, it is claimed a single 100 egg machine does the work in a season of thirty-three hens, and if these 40,000 incubators were of only 100 egg capacity there you have just 1,321,000 odd, screeching chicks put out of the hatching business, and if laying instead of hatching their eggs would pay for all the hatching operations, and then some.

Crowded brooders and colony houses certainly mean bad air, multiplying lice, disease, mortality and stunted stock. Since incubators make it so easy to hatch chicks many will hatch beyond their capacity to house or to feed right. They bite off more chicken than they can chew and then rue.

There are what are called "diseases of civilization" to which savages are not subject. Likewise with the hen her domestication and development to unnatural size and egg production have caused diseases to which aboriginal poultry was not subject.

What has become of all those chicken systems that guaranteed thousands of a town lot in the twinkling of an eye. They were and are not, but their victims still have a painful remembrance of parting with their good money for a gold brick.

In England the hen is called "The Cinderella of Agriculture" because she is so neglected by the government, and so little is appropriated for poultry culture. A number of our states are treating Biddy the same way, but perhaps they will get wise some day and wake up from their Rip van Winkle sleep.

The accumulation of pigeon droppings until the loft floor is caked with them is a sure sign that the owner is not going to accumulate wealth from the squab business. Oh, bughouse, you sure are nix-a-m-cious!

Last year 4,000 cases of eggs from the orient arrived at San Francisco under the five cent tariff. By the way they are coming in now, free of duty, the local merchants estimate an importation of 30,000 cases for the new year. This is certainly considered a deadly yellow peril by the Pacific coast poultrymen, and they have already called the attention of the government to the liability of disease being introduced by the foreign hen fruit and that they are being sold as home product.

It is claimed poultry-flog are true insects, but if a decided form through the loss of wings. This is a question for our house specialists to determine. We rather think the poultry raiser who allows his poultry to be infested has retrograded to the bughouse class.

WAGNER LEADING BASEBALL STAR

Bresnahan Says Pirate Shortstop Is Greatest Ever.

IN GAME SEVENTEEN YEARS

A Question That Caused Countless Arguments and Is Yet Unsettled in the Public Mind—Former Giant Catcher Seems to Have the Right Idea About the Famous Hans.

Who is the greatest ball player in the game? This question has been asked time and time again, has caused innumerable discussions and is still unsettled.

Hans Wagner, Johnny Evers, Mordecai Brown, Frank Chance, Ty Cobb, Joe Jackson, Tris Speaker, Ed Walsh, Eddie Collins and Hal Chase each has been referred to at some time or other as the star of all ball players. Fans and men connected with the game who admire one of these men still are of the opinion that he is the leader of the lot. Wagner, Cobb, Speaker, Collins and Jackson have probably the strongest right to the reputation owing to their ability to hit, field and run bases.

Roger Bresnahan of the Chicago Cubs, who is regarded as one of the smartest ball players in the National league, paid Hans Wagner a big compliment when he declared that the Pittsburgh shortstop is the greatest ball player the game has ever had and ever will have.

Bresnahan does not think baseball ever had a man of Wagner's ability and does not think there will ever be a player who will play the game as he has played it for seventeen years. The Cub backstop is so strong in his belief that he declared he would not give Wagner for five Cobbs, Jacksons or Speakers.

"I have watched Wagner for seventeen years and in that time have never seen him make a mistake, and no one else has. He started to play the same year I did, and because of his natural ability I took an interest in him and watched his work closely. I must say in all truthfulness that I have never seen him do the wrong thing. That may be putting it rather strong, but it is the truth. I have talked with men who have been with him for years, and they have told me the same. Tommy Leach was on the Louisville club with Wagner, and also at Pittsburgh, and he will confirm what I say. Fred Clarke and Gibson will say the same."

"If you will notice Wagner you will see that he makes all his plays instantly. He is a remarkably fast thinker. He has all his plays figured out before they are made, and he makes all his throws to the right place and at the right time and does not throw at all when he sees there is no chance to get a man. That is why he never makes a mistake."

Wagner is big, clumsy looking, but there never has been a shortstop who has covered more ground than he has. Mike Doolan is a wonderful fielder and thrower, but he does not surpass the German. As a hitter I do not think there ever has been a better one. Wagner has never reached the high marks that Anson did or Cobb has, but he has always been over the 300 mark, which is wonderful for a man who has been playing seventeen years.

"It is not so much Wagner's figures that make him incomparable at the plate as it is his ability to place a hit in any section of the field. He is not a one field hitter, as most heavy hitters are."

"He is a wonder in running the bases—that is, he was—and is still able to go around fast enough to hold his own. He is clever in touching men sliding into the bag and in holding runners on second. He possesses every qualification a ball player could desire, and as he never makes a mistake I contend he is the greatest ball player in the world, and that does not bar Cobb, Jackson, Speaker or any one else."

Federal Power Over Interstate Railroads Upheld.

STATE BOARD BEATEN

Interstate Commerce Commission Is Paramount Where There Is Conflict, Court Rules.

Washington, June 9.—The supreme court upheld the interstate commerce commission's orders in the Shreveport rate case, thus placing interstate railroads more under the commission and less under state commissions.

In holding that the rate making power of the interstate commerce commission takes precedence over the jurisdiction of state commission in situations where the reasonableness of interstate rates is called into question, the decision is believed to be one of the most sweeping declarations in favor of the dominant authority of the federal government that the supreme court has yet made.

The interstate commerce commission found that class and other rates from Shreveport to Texas points were unreasonable and ordered rates to be equalized, so that Shreveport would not be discriminated against in favor of Dallas and Houston.

Justice Hughes announced the decision of the court. He spoke of the unrestricted power of the interstate commerce commission over interstate commerce, saying the commission was expressly created to prevent conflicting state legislation.

Justice Hughes pointed out that congress and not the states had the power to prevent the instruments of interstate commerce from being used so as to injure interstate commerce.

He quoted the cases under the safety appliance law and the second federal employers liability law, supporting the power of congress to keep the channels of interstate commerce clear.

Justice Hughes said that congress, not the states, might prescribe the rule when state and national interests conflict. "Congress is entitled to keep open the highways of interstate commerce in the interest of fair treatment to all persons," said Justice Hughes. He indicated the government must control rates in the interest of interstate commerce. Whether congress reduces intrastate rates to conform with interstate rates, was not material, the court said.

Referring to the noted Minnesota rate case, Justice Hughes said that decision was expressly reserved in those cases as to what the outcome would have been had the interstate commerce commission found that the Minnesota rates discriminated against interstate commerce.

The supreme court affirmed the decision of the commerce court upholding the commission's orders.

The far-reaching effect of the decision lies in the fact that rates which the interstate commerce commission ordered indirectly increased to remove the discriminations were prescribed by the Texas state railroad commission. Under the federal commission's orders the only way the railroads may escape conflict with the Texas commission is to reduce the interstate rates from Shreveport to Texas cities so as to put the Louisiana city on a competitive basis with Texas jobbing centers.

Should the railroads elect to increase the Texas rates as the commerce court had declared they must, a new chapter in the novel situation would develop. The laws of Texas would make the railroads liable to a penalty of $10,000 to the state and $500 to each shipper for each shipment on which the low state rates were disregarded.

While the decision technically was against the railroads, it was likely to be welcome to them, lawyers said, as it was one more important step in stripping the states of what authority they now possess over the railroads and turning this authority over to the federal government.

THAW CASE IN U. S. COURT

Former Governor Stone Asks For Release of Prisoner on Bail.

Washington, June 9.—Harry K. Thaw's fight for freedom reached the supreme court of the United States when former Governor Stone, of Pennsylvania, as counsel, asked for his release on bail, pending a final decision of the proceedings by which the state of New York seeks to return the prisoner to Matteawan from his refuge in New Hampshire.

Chief Justice White gave representatives of New York until Friday to file a brief in opposition to Thaw's release, and a decision may be given next Monday, when the supreme court will conclude its work for the term and adjourn until fall.

MILITANT ASSAILS KING AT HORSE SHOW

Shouts "Your Majesty, I Protest,"
But Police Grab Her.

London, June 9.—Suffragette "furies" caused pandemonium at the International Horse Show by making an attack on King George and Queen Mary.

While the king and queen were watching the judging a woman who had been standing nearby made a dash for the royal box.

"Your majesty, I protest," the woman shouted, as she reached the box. Before she could get any further she was seized by two policemen, one of whom placed his hand over her mouth, cutting off further utterances. The suffragette struggled violently in an effort to continue her declaration, but was carried, kicking and wriggling, from the building.

The "furies" created continuous disorder throughout the show. As soon as one was ejected, another rose to take her place, only to be thrown out in her turn. One woman attempted to chain herself to the arena, but was dragged out shrieking in the midst of falling chairs.

Little attention was paid to the horses during the rioting and only a few spectators noticed the fact that Russian officers won the King Edward challenge cup.

Both the king and queen remained calm throughout the outbreak, and neither showed by manner of expression that anything out of the ordinary had occurred.

Militants stole into St. Edmund's church, at Northampton, and wrecked the pipe organ. Burnt matches strewn about the floor showed that they had attempted to set the edifice on fire.

LECTURE BILL HITS BRYAN

Imprisonment and Fine For Cabinet Officer Who Talks For Pay.

Washington, June 9.—A bill directed particularly at Secretary of State Bryan and designed to keep him off the lecture platform was introduced in the house by Representative Britten, an Illinois Republican.

The bill makes it unlawful for any cabinet officer, department head or clerk to lecture for pay other than actual traveling expenses during the time he occupies such position, and forbids members of congress to lecture for pay while congress is in session.

A $10,000 fine and imprisonment not exceeding two years is proposed for violation of the act.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Dish Drying Rack That Obviates Use of Towels.

A new device for drying dishes consists simply of a pan twenty inches square, fitted with a removable wire rack to hold the dishes on edge while draining and to keep them out of the dripping rinse water. After the dishes are washed they are set on edge in the rack, scalding water is poured over them and they are allowed to dry, the idea being to eliminate the use of the towel for drying. By this method the dishes are both cleaned and sterilized.

Boiled Pork Balls.

Select a piece of "fat and lean," plunge it into a kettle of boiling water and keep it boiling under cover until tender enough to let a fork pierce it with ease. Remove the skin and chop the meat fine with twice its bulk of dry bread. Add half this bulk of mashed potatoes and "bind" all with a well beaten egg. Shape into disks, dredging the tops with flour, and fry. When a light brown pour the other side and fry. Serve on a hot platter with potato salad, milk gravy, toast and boiled onions.

Asparagus With Eggs.

Boil eggs very hard and let them get cold. Then shell and halve them and drop them into lukewarm milk which you have slightly thickened and simmer them until creamy. In the meantime boil large white stalks of asparagus and when done arrange them on a deep platter, letting the tips meet in the center and the ends reach the edge. Now drop a large lump of butter in the eggs, add salt and pepper and a little chopped parsley and pour over the asparagus. Garnish with bits of parsley.

Currant Tapioca Pudding.

Wash a cupful of tapioca thoroughly and soak overnight in enough water to cover. Place in a double boiler three cupfuls of boiling water, one cupful of sugar and a pinch of salt and boil until the tapioca is transparent. Select the finest, ripe red currants and when the tapioca is cool stir a pint of them into it, being careful not to break the currants. Have a pint of the currants in a dish and pour the fruited tapioca over them. Heap sweetened whipped cream on top.

Huckleberry Pudding.

Make a batter with one cupful of milk, two well beaten eggs, a tablespoonful of butter, melted; season with salt and one-half cupful of sugar. Sift with two cupfuls of flour and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and stir into the milk. Add one cupful of huckleberries that have been well dredged with flour. Pour into a bake pan or dish and bake until cooked through and nicely browned on top. Serve with a sauce or cream and sugar.

Strawberry Jelly.

Dissolve one-half box of gelatin in one pint of water, strain through a muslin bag and add enough more water to make it a quart, press one pint of strawberries through a bag and add the juice to the mixture. Add two heaping teaspoonfuls of sugar, according to the acidity of the juice, and place in mold where half strawberries have been cut and laid on the bottom and sides. It can be decorated with real strawberry leaves.

Escaloped Gooseberries.

Fill a deep bake dish with alternate layers of cracker crumbs and stewed gooseberries, covering each layer of fruit with sugar and bits of butter. If the gooseberries have not been seasoned and have a layer of cracker crumbs on top. Pour a little water over the top, not more than a half cupful. Cover and bake twenty minutes. Nice eaten cold or hot and with or without cream.

Buttermilk Biscuit.

Two and one-half cupfuls of flour measured before sifting, two tablespoonfuls of baking powder in flour, one tablespoonful of lard or butter, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one cup of buttermilk in which soda the size of a large bean has been dissolved; mix soft and use as little flour as possible to roll out and bake in a quick oven. This makes twelve biscuits.

Chicken Broth For an Invalid.

Joint an old fowl, cover with cold water, bring slowly to a boil and let simmer very gently for five or six hours. Let the broth get cold and remove every particle of fat; then reheat and salt to taste, adding some carefully boiled rice if it is liked.

Removing Old Wall Paper.

Before putting on new wall paper it is best to remove the old paper, and if a boiler full of boiling water is placed in the room and all windows and doors closed the steam will soften the paper to such an extent that it is easily removed.

AN OLD TALE OF TWO CITIES.

Travel From New York to Philadelphia In Stage Wagon Days.

In the New York Gazette or Weekly Post Boy of May 9, 1768, appeared this notice:

To the Public:
That the Stage-Wagons, kept by John Barnhill, in Elm-Street, in Philadelphia, and John Mercereau, at the New-Hazling Star, near New-York, continues their Stages in two Days, from Powles-Hook Ferry, opposite New-York, to Philadelphia; returns from Philadelphia to Powles-Hook in two Days also; they will endeavor to oblige the Publick by keeping the best of Wagons and sober Drivers, and sets out from Powle-Hook and Philadelphia, on Mondays and Thursdays, punctually at Sunrise, and meets at Prince Town the same Nights, to exchange Passengers, and each return the Day after.

Those who are kind enough to encourage the Undertaking, are desired to cross Powles-Hook Ferry the Evenings before, as they must set off early. The Price for each Passenger is Ten Shillings to Prince Town, and from thence to Philadelphia, Ten Shillings more, Freight free: There will be but two Wagons, but four sets of fresh Horses, so it will be very safe for any Person to send Goods, as there are but two Drivers; they may exchange their Goods without any Mistake.

Persons may now go from New-York to Philadelphia, and back again in five Days, and remain in Philadelphia two Nights and one Day to do their Business in: The Publick may be assured that this Road is much the Shortest, than any other to Philadelphia, and regular Stages will be kept by the Publick's obliged humble Servants,
JOHN MERCEREAU and JOHN BARNHILL.

To Prevent Exaggeration.

There was once a gentleman who, having killed a man, presented himself to the editor of a newspaper. "I have come," he said, "to tell you about a painful occurrence at my house. My brother-in-law and I had an argument, and I stabbed him, and then, in the excitement of the moment, I cut his throat. Knowing what exaggerated stories are apt to get into the newspapers, I thought I had better step around and tell you exactly what did happen."—London Spectator.

Ice Peaks of New Zealand.

In southern New Zealand the line of perpetual snow is much lower than it is in the Alps of Europe. It varies, of course, in different parts of the range; but, generally speaking, a mountain 12,000 feet in New Zealand carries as much snow and ice as one of 15,000 feet in the Swiss Alps, and New Zealanders point with pride to glaciers comparable to the Aletsch and the Mer de Glace.

Just to Prove It.

"You have squandered my entire fortune."
"Well, before we were married you asked me if I would love you as well if you were poor, and I said I would, and I have made you poor to convince you I told the truth."—Houston Post.

His Genius.

"Why do people think he's a genius? Nobody can understand what he's talking about."
"No, but he can make people believe that he does."—Exchange.

He Learned His Valuation.

A tourist in Scotland came to a wide ferry. It was stormy, and the wind was constantly increasing. The Scotch ferryman agreed to take the tourist across, but told him to wait until he had first taken a cow across.

When he had returned and started across with the traveler the latter became curious.

"Will you tell me why you took the cow over and made me wait?" he asked.

"Well, now," explained the ferryman, "you see, the cow was valuable, and I feared the wind would increase so the boat might upset on the second trip!"

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Penguin a Queer Bird.

Penguins, the slowest and most ungainly of birds when out of water are transformed as soon as they enter it. They do not launch themselves upon its surface like other water fowl, but instantly plunge beneath it, where they appear at once as swift and brilliant creatures, beaded with globules of silver, where the air clings to the short, close, thick feathers that are almost like scales, as they fly through the clear and waveless depths with arrowy speed. The rapid and steady strokes of their wings are exactly similar to those of a bird flying through the air, while their feet float straight out level with their body, and are unused either for propulsion or as a rudder. The twists and turns necessary to follow the active little fish are made wholly by the strokes of one wing while the other is held motionless. The fish are chased, caught and swallowed without any slackening of speed. Occasionally the head and shoulders show for a moment above the surface in pursuit of fish, but any attempt to remain on the surface leads to ludicrous splashing and confusion, for the submarine bird cannot float, it can only fly below the surface.

How Animals Rest.

Elephants sleep standing up. When in a herd a certain number will always stand guard while the others sleep, for the big, powerful beasts are timid and cautious at night and will not go to sleep unprotected.

Bats sleep head downward, hanging by their hind claws.
Birds, with very few exceptions, sleep with their heads turned tailward over the back and the beak thrust beneath the wing.

Storks, gulls and other long legged birds sleep standing on one leg.

Ducks sleep on open water. To avoid drifting ashore they keep paddling with one foot, thus making them move in a circle.

Foxes and wolves sleep curled up, their noses and the soles of their feet close together and blanketed by their bushy tails.

Lions, tigers and other members of the cat family stretch themselves out flat on one side. Their muscles twitch and throb, indicating that they are light and restless sleepers.

Riddles.

Why can a watchmaker never make a fortune? Because his goods always go on tick.

Why is a coachman like a lover? Because he always desires to be remembered by his fare (fair).

Why is a canary like a collier? Because he is engaged up all day and has to peek for his living.

Why is a water lily like a whale? Because it comes to the surface to blow.

How would you express in one word having encountered a doctor of medicine? Met-a-physician.

Why is a person who never lays a wager as bad as a regular gambler? Because he is no better.

Why is a vine like a soldier? Because it is listed and trained, has ten drills and then shoots.

What key in music will make a good officer? A sharp major.

What bridge creates the most anxiety? A suspension bridge.

An Odd Playmate.

During the past winter a White Wyandotte rooster owned by Ralph and Glenwood Moody of Skowhegan, Me., has taken in the pleasures of winter life by each day coasting downhill on a sled with the boys. He has shown a somewhat selfish disposition by staying on the sled and having the boys haul him back up the hill. This rooster is an orphan, having been the only appreciable result of a setting of eggs. He has always been a pet, and when the boys would go to a neighbor's, though some distance, the rooster sat on the sled and was hauled to and fro.—American Cultivator.

Scouts as Tree Wardens.

Chief Ball of the Philadelphia bureau of city property has enlisted the boy scouts to act as "tree wardens" in protecting the trees in city squares. And the boys have entered into the movement with enthusiasm. The "tree warden" squads are under the direction of the city forester. As a mark of proficiency in the work the boys will be presented with bronze buttons upon enlistment in the cause, to be substituted for a silver button as they gain efficiency in the work, and finally by a gold plated silver button as they attain higher grade.

FATHER STUMPED THEM.

A Test in Mental Arithmetic That Worried the Students.

They had a schoolboy and schoolgirl party at a Brooklyn man's house the other night. Father and mother were permitted to mingle with the young folks for a while after the edge of the first fun had worn off. There were games that the elder folks knew nothing about, and they sat like wallflowers.

Finally a game of arithmetic was started by a boy who is considered the best cipherer of his class in the high school. After several problems had been given of an odd nature, over which there were much laughing and puzzling, father dared to speak up. Said he:

"Boys and girls, they used to give us this example in mental arithmetic when I went to school. I suppose it will be easy for you, but it's the best I can suggest to take part in the game." And he recited this couplet:

If a third of six were three

What would a fourth of twenty be?

The score of boys and girls present went at it. They wrinkled their brows, and they pursed their lips. The use of pencil and paper was not permitted.

The mathematician had not been among the first to try an answer. He was plainly a little perplexed. He asked to have the problem repeated and wanted father to reassure him that it was a mental arithmetic example. Finally he, too, gave an answer. But father shook his head.

"Well, then, papa, for goodness' sake tell us what it can be," said his daughters.

"The answer is seven and a half, and I'm surprised to see that I'm able to stump all you high school stars," grinned father. "Come, mother, we may as well depart. They don't play the same arithmetic games that we did."

The high school mathematician at first declared that father was in error. But next day he admitted that the answer was correct and that all had been stumped.—New York Sun.

Mr. Stubb's Mean Warning.

"One-half of the women in this world retail gossip," remarked Mr. Stubb, as he lit his after-supper cigar. "Quite considerate of you not to say all of them retail gossip," snapped Mrs. Stubb, as she washed the dishes. "Oh, no, only half, Maria. The other half wholesale it."

Making an Acquaintance

By EVERETT P. CLARKE

One day on leaving my bank after making a deposit I saw a lady at the next window—the paying teller's—trying to count a fat roll of bills. The lady was young and pretty—indeed, I was very much struck with her appearance. I thought of offering my services to count the bills for her, but this would put her on guard against me as desiring to play a confidence game and get her money.

Finally she gave up the attempt and, rolling the bills into a wad, stuffed them into a portemonnaie and left the bank. I went out at another door, hailed a street car, got aboard; a lady got in behind me and sat down opposite me. She was the one I had seen in the bank. She was carrying her portemonnaie in her hand, inviting, so it seemed to me, some thief to snatch it. No one taking advantage of the offer, she laid it on the seat beside her and proceeded to put on her gloves, which she had removed to count the money. The portemonnaie lay on the smooth surface of the seat ready to be shaken out of sight or into some thief's possession, but the lady didn't appear to worry about it, seeming far more afraid of tearing her gloves, which could not have cost over $2, than of losing a fat roll of bills.

There is nothing that will touch the heart like stupidity. And it seemed to me that there was quite enough stupidity in this beautiful creature—her eyes were great soft brown ones and her hair was a shining chestnut—to make me love her forever. I watched her and her pocketbook till I saw it slide into the crack between the seat and its back, disappearing behind the folds of her dress.

The car joggled on, most of the passengers gradually getting out. I was carried far beyond my destination, but if I had been intent on possessing myself of the lady's pocketbook I could not have been more absorbed in the situation. In fact, I did have designs on that pocketbook, but for a purpose different from that of using the money in it.

Having got her gloves on—without tearing them—the lady felt of her back hair, folded her plump little hands and was evidently lost in a day dream. She did not leave the car till it reached the terminal, and when she did she and I were the only persons in it. I waited till she had arisen and started for the door. There was the portemonnaie resting safely in the junction between the seat and its back. The lady's face was turned from me; the motorman was busy; I took up the portemonnaie, put it in my pocket and left the car. The lady started up a street. I followed her and, presently passing her, raised my hat and said:

"I beg pardon. Can you tell me where Mr. Smith lives?"

She turned her eyes upon me and asked:

"What Smith?"

"Why, the Mr. Smith, of course. There's always one particular Smith in a place."

"I don't know any Mr. Smith at all."

This was said with hauteur.

"Would you mind my walking with you till you reach your home?" I asked.

"I certainly would."

"Well, then, I will leave you. I predict, however, that before twenty-four hours have passed you will give me an invitation to visit you. Here is my card."

She took the card and, tearing it into bits, scattered them on the sidewalk. At the same time her color was rising like a bay of Biscay tide.

"Good morning," I said, raising my hat with infinite politeness, and left her. At the same time I kept her in sight till I saw her enter a dwelling standing in handsome grounds and afterward inquired all about it and its occupants. Returning to the city, I mailed one of my cards to the address and waited. By noon the next day I received a note from a Miss Edith Bedford stating that if I was the gentleman who had sat opposite her in the car the day before and could tell her anything about a pocketbook she had lost she would be obliged if I would do so. I replied that I had joined her the day before for that purpose, but, noticing that there seemed to be something in my personality that was distasteful to her, I had felt it incumbent upon me to leave her. To this she sent an invitation for me to come and see her. I did so and was eagerly received.

"Do you know anything about it?" she asked hurriedly.

"Have you found out anything about where Mr. Smith lives?" I asked in reply.

Her big eyes grew bigger. What could I mean?

I took her portemonnaie from my pocket and handed it to her. The change from the worried expression on her face to one of delight was ravishing.

"Where did you find it?" she asked.

"Where you left it on the seat in the car."

I insisted on her counting the money over till the amount came out twice alike—$200—then rose to go. By this time my facetiousness began to dawn upon her. She asked me if there was nothing she could do to show her appreciation of my kindness in the matter, and I told her there was—I should like to make her acquaintance.

I made it so effectually that we are spending our lives together.
